About APS Educational Trust:

The year was 1935. The Indian nation was yet to be born. Ruled by the British regime there was more deprivation than development. While many chose the path of fight to gain political independence, Prof N. Ananthachar with a vision trod a different path towards securing academic independence by starting a Primary School on 15th August 1935, a date Indian destiny chose for its independence, twelve years later. An endowed teacher with a Master's Degree, the founder of APS institutions was an enterprising spirit. The Director of Public Instructions gave this school its recognition in quick time, the very next year. Thus, was born a great noble educational institution namely APS Educational Trust. Today it takes pride in running more than a dozen educational institutions and pave the path for thousands of students in reaching their academic excellence.

APSET has completed 89 years of glorious academic service and it is being run by men of academic commitment who are dedicated to the welfare of society.
